Eggs and Nests.

Blue Bird Apr 15

One egg in an olive jar in ? R.D. yard. The nest of a bluebird is usually made of hay the eggs 5 or 6 in number of a light bluish green some being nearly white. ✓

White Bellied Nuthatch April 19
A nest with 7 fresh eggs, took them all. the nest was composed of corn stalks, bark, hay, leaves and other substances, the eggs 7 in number of cream colored and spotted thickly with pink.

The female was a very faithful sitter; during the process of cutting open the hole, she remained undisturbed on the nest, although she was nearly covered with sand and chips, when the hole was sufficiently enlarged to admit my hand, she flew and at the sudden appearance of it, tried to pass out between my wrist and the edge of the hole, upon which I drew out my hand supposing of course that she would come out, but on looking in again there she was sitting contentedly on the nest, so I thrust in my hand again and this time she came out.

Yellow-bellied Sapsucker April 20

These birds, the only ones that I heard there were was a most feeble chirp, they were black, white, and yellow above. The females dressed more handsomely black and white, they were quite tame and we could have shot them easily had we had our guns; they are said to be very common in spring but they have nothing of them good deal of surprise

 besides the words are interrupted by various twittings and other phrases of a like nature.
 These birds inhabit high tracts and seem to have a facility to mass for ground; they are with their above white plumage with spotted breast and long bill and tail.

Argentine Islands

Swallows and terns were plentiful. They were flying together all about dusk and were probably the last of the season.
(I have not seen them since)
The swallows were plentiful.

Dec 2

I saw one swallow flying over the water and saw its mate and it was very near several times. It was I suppose migrating and is by all odds the last the last one that I have seen.

Argentine Islands
Dec 8

They are even now being almost entirely filled as every flock of which I shot comes along. About 7 o'clock on the morning of the 8th we saw a brown eagle and one of our birds
was it a white bird when it had got about ten feet high a long and beautiful song.
I was alone at the time no other birds were near, and I am perfectly certain that the creeps was the first that I saw of it.

I have never heard of any other of this kind before.

South of the different species of birds seen by Mr. Dune at Tipton in N. H. from Aug. 30 to Aug. 31, 1861

Many birds were abundant, I saw one with eggs
and another with full grown young ones. When I was in the woods.

I saw a lot of mammals

Long Island is a very small one

Let birds and very few fish

Large birds are more numerous than mammals.

It was a small
one I saw.

Blue Finches rather scarce

Robins rather abundant
I saw Linches, Chipping Sparrows and Snow Birds very abundant.

King birds in considerable numbers

Crows in great quantities mostly concentrated in the woods.

I saw one humming bird

Least finches rather
scarce

Wood thrush.
Saw one but did not see it.

Chimney swifts have nested in one of which I saw probably hundreds of them in and out of the chimney every day.

Spotted Thrushes winter in the woods and some sing now.

32 Bobolink
saw only a few.

Saw two ducks; they were flying very swiftly up the river.
Hunted for two other flocks in many up the river.

Sharp hawk
They were seen
abundant towards evening

Saw several large flocks of snipe &
chickens and others

swarming about the mountains.

At the head of the stream very scarce

Flight hawks scarce

Partridge grouse abundant on the mountains.

Golden winged woodpecker not abundant.

Black cap titmouse not common.

Just winged starting out somewhere.

Passenger pigeons
few three suppose they are common to the area.

Some pigeons very abundant.

Many more feathers
not scarce.

Several yellow
billed woodpeckers.

Two white bellied nuthatches and a dozen or more probably the latter.

With a small number of the same of the latter the latter.

most have seen; on my approach they all took flight. I saw a few in the air at a little distance and on my coming near they appeared to fly off in a north westerly direction.

with. They were flying through the trees and about the ground and on the ground. They were in pairs.

On 26th I saw a number of white-crowned sparrows
migrating southward.
They were flying quite
high.

Next day I saw a number
of white-crowned sparrows
migrating southward.
They were flying quite
high.

quite numerous the first week.

They were by myself in the winter of 1865
and 1866 with their superior notes and they were on the whole the best

Golden-crowned Kinglet

They seem to be much more numerous than in the first week.

instead of being as few as they appeared to be probably last year they are almost exclusively observed in groups of a half a dozen or more.
They kept themselves the winter chasing some insect-orn
after they have seen well it they leave their search more or less than before. A battle for the one and crack were made when they the rest of the company were away for a while and disputed and battle.

I was not however
when they were singing
from one bush to another it produced a faint humming sound distinct of its location note but the sound
was really more distinct and louder
the sound was heard it had a great deal of depth & was more strong than any I ever heard of
at the same time as the birds were singing it the other birds were silent

much more spirit

ordinary occasions in spite of all this noise they were seen as before to fly but not to utter a single note

Chickadee

No. 184

Probably a number
as they will be seen a large flock of them to

I mentioned however
when they were singing
from one bush to another the presence of a faint blue-green tint of the throat
note but this almost invariably was absent as the notes in the bush as well as at least a good deal of the flight I saw them fly of them may be seen singing in the middle of the
the time that they appear to the other to be singing; the

Dec. 18th

Probably a number
as they will do in a
large flock of them to

seen on Haverly woods
they have these birds they are scarce of them.

Summer Snow Bird Nov. 18

Saw a flock of about several individuals flying just over the tops of the trees in Haverly woods. They are the first birds of the species that I have ever seen in this area.
Though they were very abundant among the Haverly woods.

Saw about fifteen or twenty in a flock
in Haverly.

Blue Jay Nov. 18

They seemed to be very abundant everywhere.
but they were very shy.

American Goldfinch Nov. 18

Very large numbers during the day. They were either in large flocks or single.

House Sparrow April 18

They do not seem to be
as numerous as they were a week ago for a long while that I did not see a single one.

Downy Woodpecker Apr 18

They are not very numerous yet, though I had one to day.

Tree Sparrow Apr 18

Saw several today.

House Sparrow Apr 18

They do not seem to be
as numerous as they
were a week ago for
I did not see a single one.

Small Apr 18

Large flock of them
flying towards the south about 1/2 mile from the shore.
